Students Stage Boycott

The first boycott in the history of Georgia College was staged last Wednesday against the dining hall when only 110 students out of a total of 1000 resident students attended dinner. The boycott came about, not as an organized revolt, but as a mutual discontent with present conditions.

The idea of a boycott was initiated by several GC students who felt that something should be done to elevate existing standards. It was felt that such action would draw attention to the existing problem. The major grievances of the group are (1) the hostile attitude of the staff; (2) the poor quality of the food; (3) the lack of variety in the menu; and (4) the unpleasant sanitary conditions.

From the widespread participation in this movement it can be concluded that the students of GC do care, and are not as apathetic as they have been considered.

Alumni Day, April 26

What student doesn't have a parent, friend, or former teacher who belongs to the alumni of Georgia College? All students are personally involved in this alumni day, and they are urged, along with the faculty, to help make this day a success.

The theme for the 1969 Alumni Day is "Pack the Stacks," and the main event of the day will be a tour of the new Dillard Russell Library. Other events of the day include the assembly at 11:00 a.m. in Russell Auditorium, the Alumni Luncheon at 1:00 p.m. at which the 1969 Alumni Achievement Award will be presented to Grace

Hartley, the foods editor of the Atlanta Constitution, and a tea at 3:00 p.m. at the Mansion. Special guests at the tea will be the six retiring faculty and staff members, Dr. J.C. Bonner, Miss Bertha Holt, Prof. Salvo Mangiafico, Mrs. Denise Schweitzer, Mrs. Ann Smith and Dr. Rosa Lee Walston.

Library To Hold Open House

On May 1 the public will have an opportunity to see the newly renovated and expanded Ina Dillard Russell Library. The library is described by Head Librarian Robert N. Smith as "one of the most comfortable libraries anywhere." Members of the staff will conduct guided tours through the air-conditioned, two-story, 41,000 square foot facility between the hours of 1:30 and 3:30 p.m.

The renovation and expansion were completed early last fall, and GC students were first able to use the full library in mid-September. The facility was arranged in the "modular" concept. A modular library is one in which reading space and bookshelves are alternated to allow students to work as closely as possible to their source materials.

The building provides study space for 643 students. It has a variety of seating arrangements, including semi-enclosed carrels seating one to four persons. Other features are special rooms for film and microcard readers, a photocopying machine, a typing room, a special collections room for rare books and manuscripts, a graduate reading room, a faculty lounge, classrooms, listening rooms for music and other recorded material, and a conference room.

Spring, a time for gay festivities, is here. May 10, 1969 will surely be one of these times. The Spring Dance, sponsored by the Freshman and Sophomore classes, will be held in the Formal Gardens from 8:00-12:00 (Cont. on page 4)

Men's Glee Club In Concert

The University of Georgia Men's Glee Club will present a concert at Georgia College on Saturday, April 26. The concert will begin at 8:00 p.m. in Russell Auditorium. It is free of charge and open to the general public as well as the GC student body.

The Men's Glee Club is the oldest music organization at the University. It has been a part of campus life for more than 60 years.

Since its founding in the 1907-1908 academic year, the Glee Club has performed in many states of the union and has appeared on national television. Recently the Club sang for University President Frederick Davidson's annual faculty reception, performed at the opening session of the 17th annual Georgia School Board Association Convention, and was invited to sing for the annual convention of High School Principals and Supervisors.

The group is conducted by Pierce Arant, instructor in voice and director of the Glee Club since 1966.

der Kaffee Haus To Open Friday Night

For those of you who complain there is nothing to do at G.C. during the weekends, C.A. has great news. WHAT? JUST THIS:

Friday night (that's April 25) at 7:30 P.M. on the second floor of Mayfair, the doors of der Kaffee Haus will open. Surrounded by unusual decorations while sitting beneath lights impossible to describe, you will be enraptured by Miss Linda Thurmond and Mr. Jimmy Corbett. Your taste buds will be treated with non-alcoholic mixed drinks and of course coffee, at no cost; however, contributions will not be discouraged.

If you are not a coffee lover or even a lover, come anyway. It's new and it's different.

An honor code, not THE HONOR CODE

The Honor Code that we have on this campus is one of the finest things that a campus can boast, but does ours work? It has worked, it can work, it will work!

We have come a long way since cave-man days when one simply wanted something he went and took it. Or have we? Of course there is no such thing in our socio-economic society as a prison, a criminal court of law, the FBI. We are suppose to be the smartest and most advanced generation that has ever lived on this tired old earth, but crime rates continue to soar and there is an ever increasing number of people on drugs, especially young people.

Doesn't it make you think when you and a friend start to go somewhere and he says, "Wait a minute, I forgot to lock my door." In essence he is saying he can't even trust the people he lives with. Hey buddy, that's me and you and you and you that he's saying he can't trust. Why we're his best friends, we wouldn't steal anything of his. Well maybe just a bottle of after shave lotion or that neat tie that he just bought, but that's not really stealing. I mean it's just small stuff. Besides somebody stole mine just last week.

Where does it all end? It ends, my friend, with a beginning. It ends when people begin to except the responsibility of living with other human beings.

Where do we go from here? Fellow students we must look around us, find what is to be done and do it without any reservation. We must set up our own honor code and live up to it. So now you ask where do we find this new Georgia College Honor Code? By finding ONE THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ONE personal honor codes.

Student Personnel

By Dr. William H. Littleton
Dean of Students

You, as a student, spend about three hours a day actually in classroom work. The Student Personnel Office, without being nosy about it, is interested in almost everything you do and everything which happens to you during the other twenty-one hours of the day. In some cases, our concern even extends into the three classroom hours if personal or financial problems affect your academic pursuits.

This no means implies that our office is "Big Brother" watching you" or your mother and father watching over you. If you were not a young adult with certain goals and purposes which you hope to achieve through education, you would not be at Georgia College. The main intention of Student Personnel Services is to work with you, the college, and the community in helping to create the most propitious environment for the fulfilling of your adulthood and the attaining of your goals.

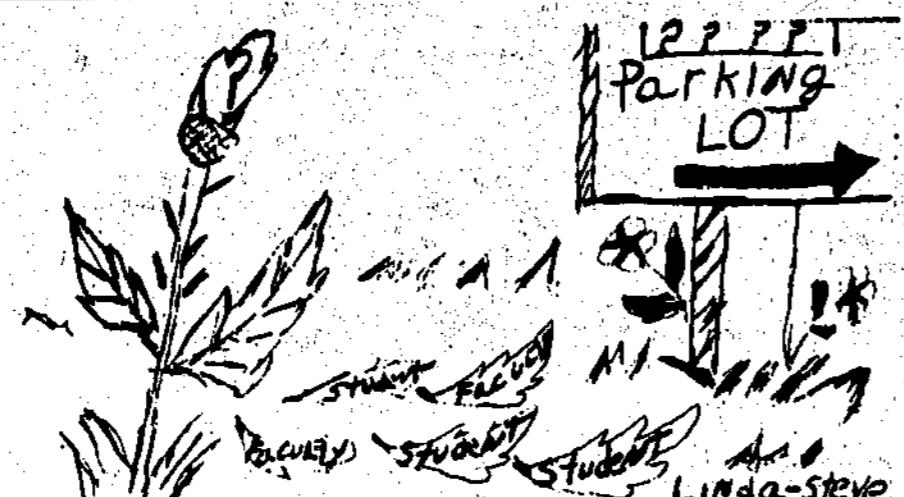

To this end, a varied assortment of services operates from this office. For instance, if financial problems or questions about future job opportunities plague you, drop by and meet Mr. Martin McGirt, the Director of Financial Aid and Placement. He administers the student work program along with advising students in procuring scholarships, loans, or grants. He also operates a placement service to assist students who need positions and enterprises that need personnel to find each other.

Every member of the college community is touched at one time or another by Miss Harriette Donahoo, the Assistant Dean of Students for Student Activities. She administers your student activities funds and plans with students for functions as divergent as the operation of the major organizations, the support of publications like Colonnade, the athletic program, dances, concerts, Gold-en Slipper, class events, and films, to name only a few.

Dean Carolyn Gettys, Associate Dean of Students for Women's Affairs, and Dean Bill Littleton, Dean of Students, concern themselves with any questions involving student welfare over a spectrum as broad as talking with students about personal problems, working with House Directors on dormitory life and needs, making a trip to the hospital at 1:30 a.m. because a student has been admitted, or representing student needs and opinions in the administration of the college.

Since the chief aim of the Student Personnel Services is the well being of the students and student life, your questions or suggestions are always welcomed. Come by to see us in Parks Hall, or, if you rather, write your questions to us, and this column will be used to address the issues you raise.

A word of thanks goes to the editors of Colonnade for making this space available for a continuing conversation between students and the college administration to the benefit of both.

President's Report

By Gail Presley
CGA President

Spring quarter is a busy time for CGA. There are class elections to be conducted, spring retreat to be planned, the handbook to be revised and made ready for publication, and most important of all, in my opinion, there is the Constitution of The College Government Association to be studied. This constitutional study is an annual task, but this year we are attempting to make more than just minor revisions in word order, pronoun, gender, etc. Indeed we are entering the study with the idea of writing an entirely new document, thereby changing, and hopefully improving the basic structure of CGA.

Now we are not trying to write a new constitution just because we do not have anything else to do. It is hoped that if the structure and form of government are made simpler so that students can understand them and if the government is made more expandable so that more students can participate, we will not have such a problem of lack of communication and support between the student government and the students as we do now.

I have appointed David Perkins to head the Constitutional Study Committee which is composed of Nancy Moynihan, Harvel Boyer, David, and myself, along with Mr. Hemphill and Mr. Sue as advisors. Both Mr. Sue and Mr. Hemphill have much experience with student governments and it is for this reason, along with their knowledge of political science, that we asked them to help us in our endeavor. The committee will meet frequently, and at all times Nancy Moynihan will have available minutes of each meeting for students, faculty, or administration to see if they wish.

We are not rushing headlong into this study without any concern for what students want. Instead, we welcome opinions from anyone. Also, we are planning a student poll which will allow students to express their views on the type student government they would like to see on our campus. These views will of course, be taken into consideration by the committee in planning the constitution.

As student unrest becomes more common, as campus populations increase, and as the gap between students and administration seemingly widens the need for a student government which can be supported by all students and at the same time be respected by the faculty and administration is evident. The task of developing such a government is not easy; much depends on student cooperation and support. But our goals are high, and we will not rest until student government on this campus has become more meaningful to the college community as a whole.

Speaking Out Letters to the editor

Dear Editor,

How about our backing up to the crossroad and getting on the right street with no detours? The article entitled "Comfort Costs" that appeared in the April 11 issue of the Colonnade has a few wrong turns. Sure the New Dorm and Wells are more luxurious than some of the old rejects.

Your article does state that the extra tuition cost is for, but our complaint is that we aren't getting what we're paying for. The hot water does not work several days of each week. Isn't that luxurious? How about the air conditioning that burned out last Fall quarter? Seems as though that extra $15 from each student paid for Winter and Spring quarters could cover the charges to get a few burned out wires replaced. The so called "chosen few" don't mind the extra money at all -- it's just that it's not being used for what it's designated for. By the way -- I'd like to know what it is used for!!!!!!

"A Chosen One"

Dear Editor,

We would like to pose a question to the administration? Why must the Campus Security give tickets so freely to boys who park in Sanford's driveway only long enough to walk their date to the door? Quite often at 10:30 or 12:30 there are no parking places along Green St. Instead of letting a girl out at the street, a gentleman parks the car and walks her to the door. We do not understand why these gentlemen receive tickets for parking in the drive next to Sanford or on the street running perpendicular to Green St., as long as the car does not block the drive and is there for less than five minutes.

It seems ridiculous that, when a security policeman knows that it is 10:29 he makes a boy move the car before taking the girl in. Does he enjoy making girls late. He should sit in on a House Council session and just see how much fun it is. We are sure that we're not the only girls living on that side of campus who wonder about this. If a member of the administration will just answer our question, then we will try to be more understanding and can explain to our dates where they can park.

Disgusted Sanford residents, Kathy Crowe, Linda Williams, Ann Fenton, Nancy Cassells.

Motivation

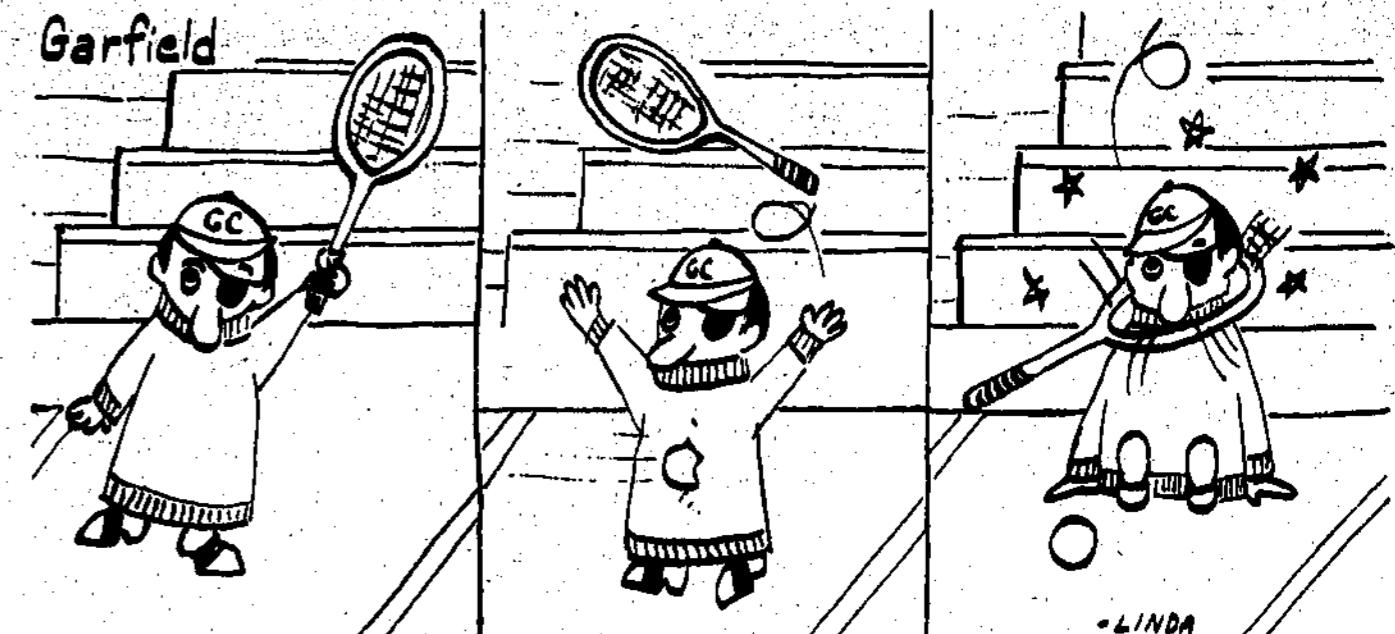

By David H. Perkins, Chairman,
Constitution Study Committee

A time has come when we have the opportunity and responsibility to study our organization of self-government. The opportunity is ceded to us under Article XIV, Section I of our present constitution; the responsibility is purely our own. We need to view our present constitution in the perspective of our present and future needs.

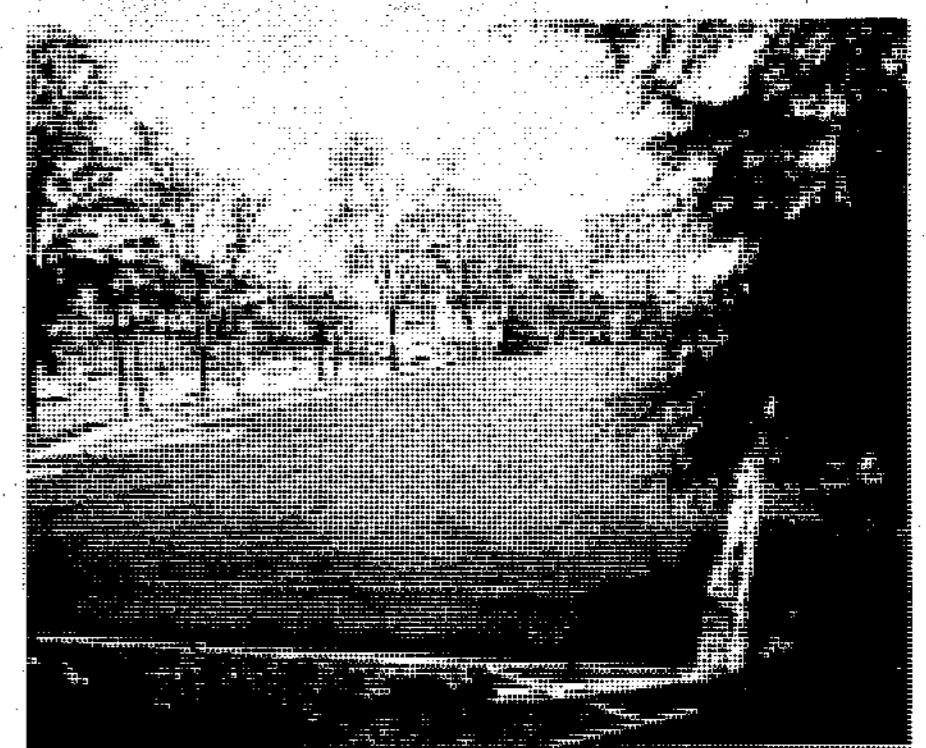

A Constitution Study Committee has already begun work on ascertaining the general will of the student body in this matter. The first meeting of the Committee resulted in a solution to the problem of hearing the desires and suggestions of each individual.

A preferential poll will be offered next week to give everyone an opportunity to voice his aspirations for our college government. The poll will be administered on the basis of individual interest. A polling area will be designated where one may fill out the poll form. The poll form will con-

Construction is taking place on campus beside Bell Dorm - this is the

But the Bell lot is un-
